KBitS
Takes Over Ekstrom Library for a 6th Year
By Josh Whitacre
Student Engagement Coordinator, Ekstrom Library

On the evening of Thursday, August 16, over 1100 students packed Ekstrom Library for what has become a Welcome Week tradition: Kick Back in the Stacks. For many freshmen, Kick Back in the Stacks or “KBitS” is their first exposure to the University Libraries and serves as a unique opportunity for us to connect with students before they even attend their first class on campus. The event is so prominent that students begin lining the sidewalks outside Ekstrom a full hour before doors open, and the scene as KBitS begins is more akin to a rock concert than a research library! (right)

Upon entering the library, students are greeted with a festive atmosphere of entertainment and activities designed in such a way that there is truly “something for everyone.” Examples from this year’s KBitS featured our partners offering dance performances, trivia competitions, a “wallflower” room with more laidback activities, and, of course, free food. On the library side of things, students were offered the opportunity to have buttons made (which is ALWAYS a popular attraction), get some library information (and swag!), and to discover the many treasures available to them in Archives & Special Collections.

This year, as part of a broader reorganization of Welcome Week, Kick Back in the Stacks was identified as one of a handful of “Signature Events” which all first-time freshmen were expected to attend. Of the 40+ official events held during UofL’s Welcome Week, only six received this status. Given this central role in the week’s activities, and the opportunity that such a showcase presents, it may be surprising to learn that the Libraries involvement in Welcome Week is a relatively new endeavor.

Prior to 2013, many of our librarians participated in Book-in-Common discussions which were held during Welcome Week; however, that was largely the extent of our participation. This initial partnership with First Year Initiatives, the office which formerly coordinated Welcome Week, would prove to be invaluable though, when outside circumstances presented a unique opportunity. With the Speed Art Museum closing that year for renovations, First Year Initiatives found themselves searching for a new venue for an event traditionally held there called “Night at the Museum.” Given Ekstrom Library’s size, location, and the strength of our previous relationship with the First Year staff, Ekstrom was perfectly positioned to fill this role and what followed was, at the time, only an interim event known as “Night at the Museum: Kick Back in the Stacks.”

Despite its beginnings as a mere placeholder event, Kick Back in the Stacks quickly grew in scope and began garnering a reputation as a highlight of Welcome Week in its own right. Over the years students have been treated to anything from caricaturists to fire dancers, with no two iterations of KBitS being the same. Now, with Kick Back in the Stacks’ new status as a “Signature Event,” the Libraries can continue to utilize this opportunity as a central showcase for next year and many Welcome Weeks to come.

WELCOME, NEELI!

The Libraries welcome President Neeli Bendapudi to UofL. We look forward to a terrific future for our university, “a great place to learn, a great place to work and a great place in which to invest.”

Society of American Archivists

This past August several of the Archives and Special Collections library faculty attended the annual Society of American Archivists meeting in Washington D.C. Elizabeth Reilly participated in committee work for the Visual Materials Section, Rebecca Pattillo participated in committee work for the Metadata and Digital Objects Section, and Carrie Daniels participated on The American Archivist Editorial Board. Kyna Herzinger presented on Toward a Theory of Trustworthy Digital Preservation: Considering File Integrity at the Institutional Level, and Heather Fox presented on the panel On Record: Documenting and Sharing – Regional Music in Akron, OH, Louisville, KY, and Washington D.C. A link to audio of the panel can be found here: http://dcpl.fullsurviceradio.org/9fbf9378. Not only did Heather present, but she also performed in the only all-archivist band, Glass Plate Zero, at the Black Cat bar and music venue. Check out a video of their original song, Archival Blues: https://tinyurl.com/glassplatezero. ARCHIVES ROCK!
Louisville Streets

At Archives and Special Collections, we have strategies and resources to help our researchers find Louisville streets and buildings – even if those buildings are long gone. Tom Owen’s encyclopedic knowledge of Louisville and its neighborhoods can always be relied upon. WHAS’s Doug Proffitt recently talked to Tom about Louisville streets near the Ohio River that have changed - or even disappeared - over time. Click here if you’d like to view this segment: https://www.whas11.com/video/news/uncovering-hidden-streets/417-8220268

Tom is also our go-to-guy when it’s time to search online Sanborn Fire Insurance maps. These maps give detailed information about Louisville buildings, including what building materials were used, size and layout of the lot and rooms, how many floors the building had, and whether there were any outbuildings on the lot. Many other historical maps may be found in our collection of Kentucky Maps on our Digital Collections website. In other Digital Collections, street scene photographs are searchable by neighborhood and/or street names.

So often, our researchers arrive hoping to find images of buildings and houses to which they are currently or historically attached. Our holdings of Louisville City Directories, stretching back into the mid-1800s up through the early 2000s, provide address locations and are searchable by names or street addresses. Once researchers know the precise address, they can start with our Subject Files: street scene images grouped by street and/or neighborhood.

Our in-house Streets Database, searchable by street address, helps us find negative numbers for images of these buildings in our collections. Student papers about Louisville, Reference files about local people, places and institutions, and general reference books about the region all supply clues in the search.

It’s a great day in ASC when we can unite a researcher with an image. We all enjoy the excitement of our researchers when we do so.

Research Assistance and Instruction

Fannie at ALA
Fannie Cox attended the American Library Association Annual Conference in New Orleans from June 21-26, 2018. She enjoyed the Opening Session speakers, Michelle Obama and Dr. Carla Hayden, who were on stage together. Hayden is the first female Librarian of Congress who is actually a librarian, and the first African American to hold the position. Fannie was glad to have the opportunity to: participate in an ALA-wide focus group to determine the future of ALA Midwinter; participate in the financial discussions and decision making as a member of the ACRL (Association of College and Research Libraries) Budget and Finance Committee; and receive service awards from the BCALA (Black Caucus of the American Library Association) for service to the organization.

Sarah at Science Bootcamp
Sarah Drerup attended Great Lakes Science Bootcamp at Purdue University in July. She was able to meet other science librarians from the region, tour lab facilities (including Wolf Park!), and attend presentations from faculty doing research in the sciences.

Rob Teaching Honors 101
Rob Detmering is experiencing the other side of the syllabus so to speak this semester, as he is teaching Honors 101 as an adjunct. His experience has already helped us understand the constraints that the faculty teaching this hybrid subject/advising class experience, and given us some ideas about how to modify the library portion of the class. In addition, he is finding the campus networking to be invaluable.

Latisha in Peru!
Latisha Reynolds traveled to Peru with her son’s high school Spanish class in June. “What I enjoyed most about the trip was visiting Machu Picchu (of course!), and sharing the experience with my son and his classmates.”
Proud Pet Parents
Amber Willenborg and her husband are the proud pet parents to Louie. He’s a golden retriever, 3.5 months old, and already 35 pounds! He’s very sweet and loves playing with his cat brother.

Outer Banks Excursions
Anna Marie Johnson traveled with her family to the Outer Banks (I couldn’t ever figure out what OBX stood for!) North Carolina in July to celebrate her parents’ 50th wedding anniversary at a house on the beach. One of the highlights was a short trip to Kitty Hawk and the Wright Brothers Memorial.

KORNHAUSER LIBRARY
Welcome, Ansley!
Ansley Stuart has accepted a Clinical Librarian position in the Kornhauser Health Sciences Library effective October 1, 2018. This position is split between Kornhauser and the Hospital Library. Ansley is currently the Allied Health Sciences Information Librarian at Augusta University in Augusta, Georgia. She received her MLS from SUNY-Albany.

LAW LIBRARY
Researching Legislative History
Kurt Metzmeier used the recent federal tax law and Kentucky pension act to illustrate how to research legislative history in difficult times for two recent articles in the Louisville Bar Association’s Bar Briefs. Read the articles at https://works.bepress.com/kurt_metzmeier/.
EMPLOYEE SPOTLIGHT

Betsy Osoffsky

UofL position and department: Technical Services Manager, Kornhauser Health Sciences Library

Year you started in the UofL Libraries: My official start date was October 1990 in the KULS department, but I worked the previous year in the Music and Kornhauser Libraries as part of a grant for a serials inventory project.

Hometown: Originally Cincinnati, then Columbus, Ohio, during and after college

Schools Attended: Capital University, music education degree

Significant Other/Family Members: My husband Michael is a cataloger in Technical Services at Ekstrom. (Yes, that’s where we met!)

Pets: We currently have two sweet tabby cats, 8-year-old Rory and 4-year-old Lola.

Hobbies/Activities: I’m a freelance violinist and long-time member of both the Owensboro Symphony and Trio Louisville. My favorite hobby is ballroom dancing, which I’ve been doing for over 13 years (but not competitively), and more recently, salsa dancing.

Favorite Vacation Spot: We don’t take nearly enough vacations, but I love the Smoky Mountains and visiting historic sites.
NEW EMPLOYEE SPOTLIGHT

I would like to take this opportunity to express my thankfulness to OLT’s PC support team, Troy Plumer, Sheila Birkla, Sahab Bolhari and Adam Lawrence for their dedication and contributions to the Canon Printing migration project carried out this Summer. This project, led by IT, came to us with many unknown questions. OLT team helped with initial pre-production equipment testing, which went smoothly, but there followed issues such as electrical outlet needs, computer driver and PC imaging, and Pharos login software configurations, etc. Special thanks go to Sheila, Sahab, and Adam for their dedicated hard work in solving PC related problems. With every one of the OLT support team’s assistance, the project in the Libraries on Belknap campus was successfully completed on time with all (250) the public PCs and labs upgraded to Windows 10 with the new printer driver. They deserve a big THANK YOU and applause. – Weiling Liu
